Post commander blasts beachfront residents

Legion to receive formal order to halt Bay dredging work

American Legion Post No. 138 of Bay St. Louis will soon receive cease and desist orders from the US Army Corps of Engineers and the State Bureau of Marine Resources regarding dredging work conducted at the end of the legion's riprap jetty offshore from the intersection of Beach Boulevard and Washington Street.

Officials of the bureau's Long Beach headquarters and Corps Mobile Office recently ordered the legion to halt dredging at the jetty's boat launch area underway by a Hancock County District Four dragline crew.

Bureau, Corps, Legion and county spokesmen Thursday all said an apparent misunderstanding by legion representatives regarding the scope of a permit allowing a 150-foot extension of the jetty resulted in the unauthorized dredging at the Bay of Passadeña. Sara Perini, Corps District Three supervisor, Thursday said Post Cmdr. Henry Prevost thought the jetty permit also included the dredging work.

The supervisor said he was 'sure' there would not be any problems resulting from the unauthorized work and reported the appropriate applications will be filed for a 'long-range' dredging permit for the boat launching area and adjacent wharf.

Prevost Friday cited the present controversy as part of continual harassment by beachfront residents living near the jetty who oppose the Legion in its efforts to improve the public facility.

"We (the legion) spend a lot of money on the pier for the benefit of the public. It costs us a lot of money, but we don't mind that," he stated.

"As if we didn't know, we have stopped the dredging work until we get a permit. We had a little misunderstanding about our present permit. This is not Sammy's (Perini's) fault," Prevost said.

"Now, the people on the beach can suck their thumbs a little longer," he stated.

The post commander estimated a permit for the dredging work would be received in about two weeks.

Francis Stevens, assistant chief of the Corps Regulatory Functions Branch, said the dragline was dredging a 20-foot by 100-foot by four-foot area which was not included in the jetty extension permit.

"They (the dragline operation) placed the dredged material on top of a nearby berm and some riprap," he stated.

"We're in the process of issuing a cease and desist order and are seeking comments from other concerned agencies," Stevens said.

The branch assistant chief reported if all agencies concerned determine the dredging work could cause environmental damage, the excavated material would have to be replaced.

Larry Lewis of the BMR Wetlands Division Thursday stated, "There was apparently some misunderstanding about the terms of the permit issued by the bureau to the legion to extend the riprap jetty."

"The permit contained no provisions for maintenance dredging and that is the problem," he said.

"We (BMR) will conduct an assessment to determine the extent of damage, if any caused by the work," Lewis reported.

"The final action regarding the unauthorized work will depend on the result of our assessment," he said.

"We discussed the matter with Perini and the post commander, and we have talked about various alternatives to resolve the problem," Lewis concluded.

Superintendent blames Texas for teacher loss

By BRENT MACEY

The recent loss of several teachers from the Hancock County School District to schools in Texas prompted Superintendent Billy Sills to investigate salaries and teacher benefits in that state.

His findings, reported to the school board Saturday, were followed by the statement, "If the legislature and the governor don't do something for teachers in Mississippi next year then we're not going to have any teachers in Mississippi."

According to Sills, some five or six teachers recently resigned from the Hancock School District to accept jobs in Texas.

Sills brought copies of salary scales from some five different school districts in Texas for the board to examine.

A first year teacher with a bachelor degree going to work for a Brazosport Independent School District in Freeport, Texas earns $16,000 a year, Sills told the board.

A teacher with same degree and experience in Hancock earns $11,275, he said.

A first year teacher in the Pasadena School District with a BA degree earns $14,000 per year, Sills said.

In addition, a teacher in that district who takes courses to earn a higher degree is awarded a $20 bonus for each semester hour spent towards earning the degree, Sills added.

Other school districts, including Baytown and Port Arthur pay $16,000 and $15,039 respectively for a first year teacher with a BA degree, he said.

Baytown also allows teachers to accumulate an indefinite amount of sick leave and Pasadena allows sick leave to accumulate to 140 days.

"The Hancock district allows teachers to accumulate 21 days of sick leave but will allow 30 days of sick days to be accumulated this coming year, Sills said.

He noted teachers in Hancock are not awarded any bonus while working for a higher degree.

"It's not recognized here until they have the degree," he said.

Board member Woodrow Ladner stated, "Every year the legislature seems to put this (teacher salary increases) on the back burner. It should be the number one priority for every state in the nation. We're talking about the future of the country."

In other business, the board discussed taking possible action to stop students from damaging several buses in the district.

Sills estimated some seven buses in the district will have to have new seats. The cost is estimated at $3,000.

According to Ladner, students who rode the buses last year slit the upholstery and also broke seats from their moorings.

One bus was so badly damaged that students could not be seated. When they refused to sit on the floor last year, the driver would not allow them to ride, Woodrow Ladner said.

Ladner suggested the bus drivers assign every student a seat and have the bus driver inspect each seat at least once every day.

He suggested the offenders and parents be brought before the school board and be forced to pay for the damages.

Talk of damaged buses also prompted Ladner mention one bus 'covered with graffiti."

"There's so much graffiti on that bus that Webster wouldn't be able to define some of it," he said.

Sills noted that only seven of the buses were in need of repair.

"We've got 39 buses and it's only about seven that have been damaged," he said.

Board members then discussed the need of buying more school buses for the district.

Money can be borrowed from a school principle account to buy the buses if no money is owed to that account, Sills said after the meeting.

Board member Johnnie Banks told the board that it still owed money to the principle account for buses purchased several years ago.

Two arrested drunk in 'birthday suits'

By ELLIS CUEVAS

In two unrelated incidents, Hancock County Sheriff's Deputies arrested two men Friday night who were naked and drunk according to Sheriff Ronald Peterson.

Peterson said his office received a call at 9 p.m. Friday reporting a man walking around the Hospitality Station with no clothing.

"Hancock Deputy Harold Heine answered the call and found Clyde Leon Fox of Buras, La. hitchhiking on I-10 with no clothing," Peterson stated.

Peterson continued, "Fox told us this morning he remembered picking up a woman hitchhiking on I-10 and the next thing he awoke in jail this morning without any clothing. He was very intoxicated and is charged with public drunk and indecent exposure. His bond has been set at $215."

Fox told police he was driving a 1967 Mustang and they are investigating its disappearance.

"Captain Paul Bernard and Ronnie

Ferrell, auxiliary deputy were on a routine patrol on Beach Blvd. near Buccaneer State Park at 1:20 a.m. Saturday when they came upon a subject standing on the side of a parked vehicle without clothing. They arrested Eric W. Knight, 21, 920 Chiniche St., Bay St. Louis and charged him with public drunk and indecent exposure," Peterson added.

Knight was released from the Hancock Jail Saturday morning under a $215 bond.

NAKED ON BEACH

Waveland Patrolman Veronica Hattabaugh checked a report of a male bather naked on Waveland's Beach Saturday afternoon. The officer was told by sunbathers the suspect had put his pants on and left the beach.

In other activities the Hancock Sheriff's office received a bomb threat Saturday morning.

Peterson stated, "Dispatcher Mary Biehl received a call on the Harrison County telephone from a male reporting a bomb had been set to go off at the gas tank at the sheriff's office."

"Hancock Deputies, Bay Police and also Bay St. Louis firefighters made a thorough check of the area and it was determined there was no merit to the bomb threat," Peterson allowed.

A total of ten persons with alcohol related arrests were booked at the Hancock County jail over a 48-hour period.

Police probing Bay DDS office burglary

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

The Bay St. Louis Police and Hancock County Sheriff's Departments are investigating a recent burglary at a dental office in that city.

Sheriff's Investigator Delbert Seay Friday said burglars ransacked and stole hypodermic syringes, an empty cash box and a large pressurized tank with gauges containing nitrous oxide (laughing gas) at the office of Dr. M. Bert Keel.

The dentist's office is at the corner of Second and deMontluzin Streets.

Seay reported he and Patrolman Larry Ladner of the Bay police department investigated the incident which apparently occurred sometime between closing time Monday and Tuesday morning.

The investigation said the office's front door was kicked in by the burglars to gain entrance to the building to steal the items valued at about $500.

Keel called Bay police after finding his office ransacked Tuesday morning, Seay reported.

Investigator said several pieces of jewelry, funds and other items were taken and sent to the State Crime Laboratory in Gulfport for identification.

Four Bay St. Louis residents are scheduled to appear in court Monday.

St. Louis City Court facing various charges stemming from an apparent brawl in front of a convenience store.

A police department spokesman Friday reported three men, one woman and a teenage girl were arrested by several officers at the Junion Food Mart at the intersection of US-90 and Second Street at about 10:20 p.m. Tuesday night.

Patrolmen Ben Palmer, Murray Ladner Sr. and Bob Wells, all of the Bay department, and Patrolman Chuck James of the Waveland Police Department responded to the incident after the store manager telephoned for assistance, the spokesman said.

Susan L. Cochrane, 34, and Jerry V. Silvestri, 32, both of Metairie; and Edward D. Beary, III, 18, and Eddie D. Martinich, 31, both of Thibodaux, are all charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

In addition, Cochrane is charged with possession of paraphernalia and Beary is charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

All were released on bonds which include Cochrane at $500, Beary at $500, and Martinich and Silvestri each at $150.

Martinich was released in custody of his parents.

The three juveniles were intoxicated.

Westinghouse abandons Minge plans

Westinghouse Electric Corp. today announced that it has abandoned plans to build a new plant in the St. Louis area. The company had been negotiating with the city of St. Louis for a site on the Mississippi River.

Jim Lewis, who has been the project manager for the plant, said the Harrison County Board of Supervisors and the Development Commission had agreed to build the plant. "With the slow-down in market growth, we decided it would be unwise to start considering expanding our open office furniture manufacturing capacity at this time."

Westinghouse has similar plants in Michigan, Puerto Rico and Ireland. Lewis said these will be sufficient to meet current needs.

"Our market has not developed to the point we could have a fourth plant... This is a real personal defeat for me," said Lewis, who reported he had been looking forward to moving to the Coast.

as the economy picks up" Wingo said. Westinghouse announced in April 1966 it would build a new plant in Hancock County and the plant currently would employ 150 people at peak capacity. A criticism was leveled in the spring of 1966, but work was delayed because of a prolonged weakening in office-furniture construction and in the office-furniture market.

Council to discuss mayor's veto Tuesday

By BRENT MACEY

Bay St. Louis City Council members are expected to decide at their upcoming Tuesday meeting whether or not to override Mayor Larry Bennett's veto of a city ordinance which prohibits the use of public vehicles on private property.

Bennett, a week ago Friday, vetoed an ordinance which had been passed by the council May 19.

The veto, filed by Bennett May 28, states, "The constitution of the State of Mississippi does not provide for publicly-owned equipment to be used on private property; therefore, it would be redundant and superfluous for Ordinance No. 268 ... to be adopted."

The council had approved adopting the ordinance by a 3-1 vote.

To override the veto the council must now muster a 4-1 vote in favor of the ordinance.

At the May 19 meeting, Councilmen James Thriffley III, Wilmer Seymour and Gene Taylor voted in favor of passing the ordinance.

Councilman Harry Favre voted against the ordinance and Councilman Sheldon Seuzeneau was absent from the meeting.

Friday, the possibility of having four councilmen vote in favor of overriding the mayor's veto Tuesday looked slim. Councilman Seuzeneau stated he thought the veto would stand.

"I agree with the mayor 100 percent," Seuzeneau said.

Favre stated he also would not vote in favor of overriding the veto.

At the May 19 meeting, Favre did not vote for the ordinance since the attorney was not present, he said.

But Friday he said he had talked to the council attorney and learned there is a state law against the use of public equipment on private property.

"There already is one on the books so I'm not going to vote for it (the ordinance)," he said.

In reference to the ordinance Seuzeneau said, "I would say it's ill conceived, superfluous, redundant, vindictive and designed to embarrass the mayor."

"I think to carry this ordinance over (Councilmen Taylor and Thriffley) to give some specific instances of where and when the mayor is buying votes," Seuzeneau said.

Seuzeneau's comments were in reference to published quotes by Taylor who said that work performed by the city for private individuals is "nothing more than buying votes."

Friday Taylor would not give specific instances of where city equipment has been used on public property.

However, he said "If anybody asks me I'll give them some specifics."

"Look at this way, We've got a situation in Ward One and throughout the city. Drainage is bad, ditches need to be cleaned, culverts are blocked, gas is leaking... time and time again he (the mayor) says there isn't the money or the manpower to remedy the problems but then he turns right around and sends a city crew to private individuals to grant political favors."

Taylor claims a law in the city would prevent this since the law would be "closer to home" and make prosecution of violators "much simpler."

Taylor said prosecution of an offender now involves determining which section of state law has been violated, awaiting a Grand Jury's indictment, and having the trial scheduled.

"If we had a city ordinance we could say Ordinance 268 has been violated and bring the person before a judge," he said.

Also, state law specifies no fixed penalty, Taylor said.

State law sets a maximum penalty of $500 and or 90 days in jail.

The ordinance passed by the council sets the maximum penalty for offenders.

Councilman Thriffley agreed with Taylor that an ordinance in the city would be more effective than relying on the state law.

"Whom are you going to listen to, a policeman in Jackson or a policeman here. It's the same thing with the ordinance," Thriffley said.

In addition to making enforcement of the law simpler, Thriffley and Taylor stated the law would protect the city from possible liability suits resulting from non-city workers being injured while riding in city vehicles.

A provision in the vetoed ordinance states "no one other than city employees, contractors or prisoners are to be transported in city vehicles."

Both councilmen stated they did not think state law addressed the issue of non-city workers riding in city vehicles.

Three-year-old killed by car

A three-year-old Delisle girl was killed Friday about one and one-half hours after being struck by a car on the Kiln-Delisle Road.

According to a Harrison County Police report, Shanette Louise Dedaux of Route 3, Pass Christian was walking with her cousin, Marilyn Deadeaux, 28, and several other children when she ran out into the road and was struck by an eastbound car driven by Everett Cuevas Jr., 30, of Pass Christian.

An investigation revealed the accident was unavoidable according to Maj. Jerry Cooper, chief of patrol.

No charges have been filed. The report stated Cuevas took the child and Mrs. Dedaux to the hospital for treatment.

The child, who arrived at the hospital at 1:35 p.m., died shortly before 3 p.m., Cooper said.

HIGH CARES

These are facts about your community hospital, Hancock General Hospital.

What new equipment has been purchased by Hancock General Hospital to improve patient services?

In order to increase labor efficiency and to improve patient care, Hancock General Hospital has installed an 'aca' discrete clinical analyzer, a new sophisticated instrument to automatically analyze blood serum and other body fluids. This analyzer, developed by the Du Pont Company, performs rapid and accurate chemical analyses of body fluids 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

The 'aca' represents a major investment in the hospital and laboratory, which adds capacity to respond to the growing need for quick and accurate diagnostic tests day or night.

Chemical analyses represent the largest group of clinical tests performed in the laboratory. The 'aca' enables the existing staff to accept this increasing workload without compromising efficiency or quality. The first test results from the instrument can be obtained in less than eight minutes, making it extremely beneficial in emergency cases.

The 'aca' has the basic capability of performing 30 diagnostic tests. In any order, Hancock General Hospital can select from the available tests the 30 most important to local laboratory needs.

Richard Flowers, Laboratory Manager, recently completed a week-long training session on the operation and maintenance of the 'aca' at Du Pont's training center in Wilmington, Delaware.

Mr. Flowers states that the quality of the 'aca' for routine and emergency use makes it a valuable asset to the laboratory. Better patient care, through improved, 24-hour-a-day laboratory service, is a goal of Hancock General Hospital. The 'aca' gives us flexibility to meet this goal with fast response time on a variety of tests at any hour of the day. It also allows us to expand capabilities with the existing staff, thus leading to cost containment economies.

Emergency
well handled

While Wednesday's industrial explosion in Gulfport is indeed a tragedy for the families of the three men killed and a trying ordeal for the injured and their families, we feel the magnitude of the disaster was considerably lessened by the courageous actions of so many emergency first responders.

Firefighters, police and ambulance drivers risked serious injury to rescue the plant personnel and others injured by the explosion, fire and resulting toxic smoke and fumes.

Congratulations are also due the many newspaper, television and radio reporters and photographers of the Biloxi-Gulfport area who also risked injury to bring the story quickly and thoroughly to the public.

We are especially appreciative of behind-the-scenes efforts of Dispatchers Melva Necaise of Catahoula Community and Cheryl Kinney of Gulfport.

Mrs. Necaise, radio operator for the Hancock County Sheriff's Department, was instrumental in having eastbound traffic rerouted off I-10 onto US-90 at Hwy. 603, thus surely preventing many injuries which would have resulted from motorists inadvertently driving into the contaminated area north of Gulfport.

Kinney performed coolly and efficiently under extreme pressure in handling Mobile Medic's radio traffic and assisting in the coordination of the firm's rescue efforts for several hours during the emergency.

It is reassuring to know level-headed professionals are on the job here when disaster strikes.

We also wish a speedy recovery to the many who were injured, including John Rester, Mobile Medic president; Curtis Newman of the Highway Patrol; Dom San Phillip of Mobile Medic; Pat Sullivan, Gulfport fireman and free lance photographer; Kathleen Favre of Gulfport, Plastifax secretary; and Gulfport Mayor Jack Barnett.

Next Wednesday afternoon a blood drawing will be held at the American Legion Home on Blue Meadow Road, Bay St. Louis.

Friday morning we talked to our cousin Donald Cuevas, (still trying to figure out why they call him Flash at the post office) and he said Wednesday he will give his 57th unit of blood.

Donald along with many other residents of our area are very faithful in turning out for blood drawings because they know the importance to the life and health of our community in having a good supply of blood available in case of emergencies.

We are told our current supply is low, so there is a need to replenish the supply.

Blood is being used by residents on a continuous basis, not just during emergencies, like for operations.

We know 57 units of blood is a lot to give, but at one time Donald had to start from scratch and has given blood whenever possible.

So Wednesday could possibly be your first unit donation of blood, and your donations would grow with each drawing.

The time is from 2-8 p.m. at the American Legion Home. The Red Cross Mobile Unit, local doctors, nurses and all types of volunteers will be waiting on you.

It was good news for the residents of Waveland, Bay St. Louis and the county when the public hearing was over Tuesday night on the animal shelter proposal.

Many problems facing the sheriff's office, police departments and dog catchers will be solved when the new animal shelter is completed.

We know the Bay-Waveland Humane Society has been working diligently for several years trying to get a suitable location for the construction of the shelter.

When one considers the areas to be served, the selection of the site in Waveland is probably the best location possible as it is rather centralized for the County, Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

The sharing of the cost of operation of the facility by the three governmental agencies is also something we think is for the best interest of the public.

We want to thank everyone involved with the animal shelter for their hard, long, long hours, days and months of work on this project.

Activities were rather brisk Friday at the Hospitality Station on I-10 with the celebration of Hospitality Day.

Hancock's Miss Hospitality, Alesia Smith, Mississippi's Miss Hospitality, Patra Massey; Welcome Center employees and members of the Bay-Waveland and Diamondhead Garden Clubs added a little extra to the day with a large cake and special favors for visitors.

We feel the selection of Pattie Lady as manager of the Hospitality Station was a good move and know she will do a fine job.

We did miss being greeted by Lillian Dillard Buice, but do hope she really enjoys her retirement.

It is amazing as to how many travelers stop at the best Hospitality Station in our area.

MISSISSIPPI
CONSUMER REPORT

P.O. Box 220, Jackson, MS 39205 (601-354-7130)

BEWARE OF
IMITATION PRODUCTS

Imitation products seem to be on a rise today states Attorney General Bill Allain.

Allain stated that the biggest problem confronting many consumers and businesses alike is that the imitation products so closely resemble the established brand name that it is difficult for them to distinguish between the two.

These imitators attempt to take advantage of the public by passing low quality, inferior merchandise, making the consumer think he or she is getting the authentic brand.

Manufacturers of the imitation goods capitalize on advertisements, packaging, and the reputation of legitimate products.

These unscrupulous businesses design their product so carefully, that at a glance, the two goods look identical, and only the careful shopper can tell the difference.

Frequently copied products include cosmetics, jewelry, jeans, pantyhose and cassette tapes.

The imitation product does not always undersell the known brand name.

Often the consumer pays the same price or higher for the imitation. Sellers have been known to mix the imitation in with the established brands to even further fool the shopper.

Imitations are bad for reputable businesses because these imitations misrepresent quality to the unsuspecting consumer.

This misrepresentation can, in fact, be fraudulent, and the consumer has the right to be protected from such practices.

To protect yourself from being trapped into buying imitation products, carefully check the advertisements and labels of goods before purchasing.

For additional information contact Consumer Protection Division, P. O. Box 220, Jackson, Miss. 39205.

I try to keep up with market research as it affects my business and recently noted some departure from the usual nose-count procedure. It had something about "multi-persons." What's The Deal?

Dear WTD: The concept of the multi-person was included in a presentation to the National Retail Merchants Assn. in Toronto recently.

Basically the concept is that every person may be at least three people. It depends on where they are: 1) at work, 2) with their family, 3) or at play with their friends.

Marketing, of course, counts each person as one now. If you will. But in personality, enumeration, each person would represent three persons—one for each of these situations in which they exist. And a significant portion of time is spent in each situation.

not all kept pace. "Marketing strategies that focus only on 'product' people" may be focusing on a limited two-dimensional view of the world," he said, when "the real marketing world is three dimensional: 'Product, people & place'."

"If strategies are built on this interpretation of the marketplace, they may identify 'productive' brand positioning opportunities, especially important in a flat market where the only way to increase volume is to increase market share," Mr. Light pointed out.

The concept is certainly interesting and seems to make sense. What it really means at the local level is that underestimates your presence, but on the other hand it would multiply the local population by three.

Ole Miss symposium explores space law

Giant satellite capable of providing Earth with an inexhaustible energy source, manned space stations, factories and scientific laboratories in space, telecommunications satellite farms—all these are in the foreseeable future for outer space, according to speakers at the recent "Law and Security in Outer Space" symposium at the University of Mississippi Law Center.

As the participants from across the United States and Europe have discovered, such complicated technological advances can also result in complex legal and political questions.

The Standing Committee on Law and National Security and the International Law Section of the American Bar Association, in cooperation with the Ole Miss Law Center, provided a two-day forum for American law professors and international law, scientific and military authorities to explore in depth such major issues confronting users of outer space.

As speaker Ken Pederson, director of International Affairs for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) observed, "One of the signs of a growing maturity in space is that it's no longer just an arena for spectacular kinds of things but it's become a working environment."

The major forum for developing a body of principles and rules pertaining to man's activities in outer space has been the United Nations Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, which has been instrumental in drafting five major international agreements.

The symposium's organizer, Ole Miss law professor Dr. Stephen Gorove, who is the International Astronautical Federation's delegate to this UN Committee, began the symposium by listing the major unresolved space issues still confronting the U.S.

They include remote sensing of Earth from space, direct television broadcast by satellites, definition and delimitation of "outer space" and outer space activities, questions relating to the Geostationary Orbit, and the use of nuclear power sources in outer space.

These subjects were also the ones most frequently dealt with by workshop speakers, in addition to discussion about demilitarization of space and the potential and problems for use of space by private industry.

Roy Gibson, former director-general of the European Space Agency (ESA) and now a London aerospace consultant, reminded participants that "our concern should be to ensure that the regulation making keeps pace not only with technological progress but also with practical needs."

Many speakers remarked on the future of outer space. Space shuttle astronaut Major Bryan O'Connor predicted that NASA's next goal will be the establishment of an orbiting Space Operation Center, which would be permanently manned, with the space shuttle serving as a bus for staff and materials.

Such a space station, which could be operational by the late 1980s, would be used to repair, refuel and reconstruct space vehicles.

A solution to Earth's energy problems could be found in the construction of grid-like solar power satellites (SPS), covering approximately a 50-square-mile area in space.

According to Paul Dembling, former general counsel for NASA and the General Accounting Office, the sun's energy would be transmitted from the photovoltaic cells of the SPS in the form of microwaves to ground stations on Earth, where it would be transformed back into electricity for use in the national grid.

"This would produce twice the usable power generated by America's largest hydroelectric dam and it is calculated that 45 of these fully operational structures would match the current electrical generating power of the U.S."

Though start-up costs would admittedly be enormous, several proponents of SPS contended that this outlay for an inexhaustible resource would be less than the U.S. must now pay over a comparable 15-25 year period for energy from such conventional sources as oil, gas, and coal.

Private industry is also looking to space. Retired Army Lt. Gen. Daniel O. Graham heads a team of scientists, space engineers, strategists and economists who proposed a national strategy for defense and economic development in space called High Frontier.

He envisions "space labs and factories to make stronger alloys, clearer glass for fiber optics, purer crystals for microelectronics, perfectly spherical ball bearings, and new wonder drugs whose manufacture is possible only in the pristine environment of space."

A speaker representing private industry predicted that the extent to which private firms would use outer space is "the extent to which they can feel secure doing so."

One cause of concern is the large amount of space debris and other objects already in space, a total of 4,651 items in April 1982, according to New York lawyer and former U.N. delegate Edward R. Finch Jr. Finch warns, "We must never forget that in outer space simple debris can become a very serious high velocity weapon of destruction of other satellites."

He and others support regulations that would require the responsible parties to dispose of no longer functional space objects, possibly by using the space shuttle to tow them to an orbit where they will burn.

Other weapons in space were a major topic of the symposium. Although treaties prohibit the stationing of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction in space, other military hardware isn't precluded.

Efforts are continuing, however, to expand weaponry limitations. Normal Wulf, deputy general counsel for the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, estimated that "70 percent of the Soviet space systems serves a purely military role and they continue to develop and test an ASAT (the generic term for any device capable of destroying satellites in earth orbit)."

To improve satellite survivability in the face of this threat, the U.S. also is working on an ASAT capability.

Satellites are of prime importance in verification of arms control agreements as well as in international telecommunications.

Ronald Stowe, director of government and international affairs for Satellite Business Systems, foresees problems developing over the use of the Geostationary Orbit, the area 22,300 miles above the equator where satellites rotate at the same speed as Earth, making them stationary and ideally located.

He predicts strong moves by developing nations at the 1985 World Administrative Radio-Conference (WARC) to assign specific slots and frequencies in the orbit to each country, desiring them, whether they now have satellite capabilities or not.

"Such subdivision could result in the U.S., common carriers and telecommunications users being precluded from—or having to pay greatly enhanced prices in order to use—orbital and spectrum resources not actually needed at that time by anyone else."

Symposium participants expected compromise on this issue, as is frequently the case with regulations and agreements governing space use, and predicted the results of such conferences at WARC would be the subject of future space law workshops.

DRUG QUIZ

Used by permission; all rights reserved by DATE, St. Louis, Mo.

QUESTION—The average smoker's life expectancy, when compared with the average non-smoker's life expectancy, is estimated to be reduced by:

- 3 years
- 6 years
- 9 years
- 12 years

ANSWER—According to life insurance underwriters, the cost of smoking in terms of mortality generally assumes a decrease in life expectancy by 2-15 years or more, depending on the amount smoked, age when one starts to smoke, and amount of inhalation. On the average, smokers die 9 years younger than non-smokers. This has been calculated to be a reduction of life expectancy of about 14 minutes per cigarette smoked.

Correct answer: "c."

INTEREST RATE CRISIS

By Senator Thad Cochran (R-MS)

The interest rate situation is a very serious concern to the Congress, as more and more businesses and families throughout the nation are being adversely affected.

It is a most urgent economic problem. While great success has been achieved to bring spending by the federal government under control, continued high interest rates may undermine the economic recovery program of the President.

It has been the hope that reductions in federal spending and progress toward a balanced budget and lower deficits would reduce the demands for credit and would, therefore, bring about a corresponding reduction in the rates of interest charged by banks and other lending institutions.

In spite of some downward movement, the rates are still very high.

There is a spreading perception that Wall Street bankers and big city financial interests are not being as cooperative as they could be in helping the economic recovery program work.

Some in Congress are talking about imposing credit controls. There is also some sentiment here for a national usury law; in effect a nationwide ceiling on interest rates.

I do not want to see the Congress take hasty or ill-advised action that might make matters worse instead of better. But something has to be done. There must be some real reduction in rates soon or we will have a complex recession on our hands.

With that in mind, I have cosponsored a bill to create a National Commission on Interest Rates.

The commission would be directed to conduct a thorough but prompt review of the interest rate situation and report to the President its recommendations for bringing interest rates down to acceptable levels.

You can't help but wonder how a giant corporation, such as Conoco, can arrange for about $7 billion in credit for a merger or acquisition deal, when small businesses and individuals have trouble renewing their notes at local banks. We are told there is insufficient credit available, and when a loan is available the rates are at 20 percent or more.

It would like to see a better spirit of cooperation between financial institutions to help restore a more reasonable level of interest rates. Lower interest rates are a must if we are to stabilize our economy and restore the economic health and vitality which America needs.

If this can be done without radical far-reaching measures by Congress and the executive branch, it would be to everyone's benefit.

LEGAL BRIEFS

By Richard F. Gerry
President
Association of Trial Lawyers of America

There are some in the United States who would have America emulate the English legal system. They would change the American legal system by reducing or eliminating the use of juries in civil cases, by appointing all judges for life, by making attorneys accountable to the court first and the client second and by eliminating various kinds of cases from the courts.

However, a recent trip to England enabled me to compare the two legal systems and convinced me that the English legal system is undemocratic, non-adversarial and overly ritualistic.

For example, in England no lawyer is permitted to take cases on a contingent fee basis. They must be paid regardless of the outcome of the case, either by the client, legal aid or someone else. The result of this rule is that civil cases for damages as we know them in the United States are virtually unknown in England. Thus, only those people of means obtain legal representation.

This contrasts drastically with the American legal system which enables the poorest person to obtain the services of the best lawyer on a contingent fee basis.

In addition, the right to a civil jury trial is guaranteed in the U.S. by the 7th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. There is no comparable document in England.

Target dates set to form county wastewater district

By BRENT MACEY

Several target dates must be met by Hancock County if it is to become a separate entity in charge of resolving its own wastewater problem before 1987.

The latest dates were revealed at a Waveland Wastewater Authority meeting Wednesday by Ray Eaton, the authority's engineer.

Eaton noted that the Mississippi Bureau of Air and Water Pollution Control has finally agreed to allow each of the three coastal counties to form separate wastewater authorities.

Target dates must now be met if everything is to run smoothly so Hancock can become eligible to receive federal funds to implement sewerage treatment facilities.

The first date of Aug. 1, has been set by the bureau as the date when the three governing bodies in Hancock must agree to join the Waveland Wastewater Authority for Hancock County, Eaton said.

He stated he hopes representatives from Bay St. Louis, Waveland and the county will meet at the next authority meeting July 7, to work out any differences which currently exist between the three governments.

Bay St. Louis, in the past, agreed to join a county wastewater authority when it discovered that the bureau would not allow Bay St. Louis to form its own wastewater authority independent from Hancock County and Waveland.

However, the Bay St. Louis City Council has indicated it wanted Bay St.

Louis to have veto power if it joins the county authority.

Having Waveland and the county agree to Bay St. Louis's proposal has been the major problem to date, according to Joseph Gex, Bay city attorney who has been working to resolve differences between Bay St. Louis and the other two governments.

Gex was unavailable for comment this week on how close the matter is to being resolved.

After the three governments have agreed to join the Hancock authority, Eaton said he would have to update some 21 points in an existing 201 plan.

The update will hopefully be completed in September so that the bureau can review Eaton's work before Nov. 1—the last target date of the year.

Eaton said the public hearing should be conducted by Nov. 1.

He noted the board must begin advertising the public hearing in late September.

By Nov. 1, Eaton said he hopes to have received final input from the bureau on his revised 201 plan.

That input will be incorporated with any revisions occurring as a result of the public hearing.

Following the public hearing, a revised plan will be sent to the bureau. The bureau will review the plan and then send the package to the Environmental Protection Agency in Atlanta, Ga. for final approval, Eaton said.

The package must also be approved the governor, he added.

Eaton speculated that the final approval would take some one to one-and-one-half months.

"Once the plan has been approved the coast will be redesignated into three separate county authorities," he said.

"Once we (Hancock) have been designated as a district then we can receive funds that are available. We can't apply for the funds until we're designated," he said.

and began fighting with each other in a car parked in front of the store, the spokesman said.

When police arrived at the scene they apparently spotted a gun barrel of a .22 caliber pistol protruding from under a front seat and found several hypodermic syringes in the woman's purse and inside the car, the spokesman explained.

CHARGED IN ATTACK

A Bay St. Louis man was found guilty Wednesday night in City Court of assault and battery of a woman.

Henry C. Brown, 55, of 306 St. John St. pled innocent, but was found guilty by Judge Joseph Benvenuti, the police spokesman said.

"He was fined $500 and sentenced to six months in jail, but $400 of that fine was suspended along with the entire jail sentence as long as he exhibits good behavior during that period of time," the spokesman stated.

Brown apparently kicked and verbally attacked Herta Smith of Bay St. Louis at his residence as she was paying the man for carpentry work she said he did not satisfactorily complete, the spokesman explained.

DRUG ARREST

A Louisiana man is scheduled for a June 9 hearing at 6 p.m. before Justice Court Judge Horatio Frierson facing a charge of possession of a controlled substance.

Investigator Alvin Ladner of the sheriff's department Friday said Tommy Mire, 35, of Westwego was arrested by Auxiliary Deputies Harold Heine and James Holden at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Burger King in Bay St. Louis.

Ladner reported the deputies were eating supper at the fast food establishment when Mire entered the building apparently intoxicated and began to cause a disturbance.

"Upon further investigation it was revealed that Mire possessed what appeared to be a valium pill," he stated.

Mire was released from jail after paying a $500 bond, Ladner added.

However, other board members did not agree and requested Sills check that account.

Also at the meeting the board agreed with a recommendation from Louie Ladner that 16th section land leases be renegotiated at a faster pace.

The school board took over 16th section land leasing from the county Board of Supervisors in 1978 and have been working since to update many leases which are considered grossly inadequate.

ASCS Report

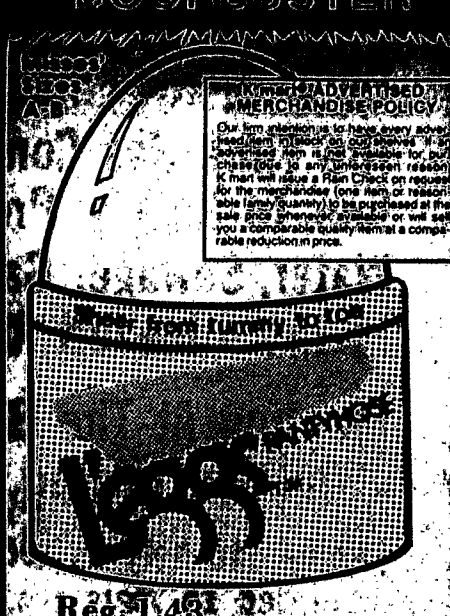

PRODUCTION DATA
Wheat farmers are advised to turn in to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Office their evidence of 1982 production.
Franklin A. Gennin, county executive director of the Pearl River-Hancock County ASCS Office, said sales slips, warehouse receipts, or similar documents are acceptable.
Farmers are in the midst of harvest and warehousemen and other handlers are preparing records which can be used in establishing yields. Such records should be documented to identify the farm on which the wheat was produced.
The best time to turn in these records to the ASCS Office is promptly after harvest while all records of production are available.
Gennin said that wheat producers who have questions relative to production evidence or other aspects of the wheat program should contact their local ASCS Office.
ACREAGE BASE
Now that the sign-up period for 1982 farm programs has ended, the next step will be certification of crop acres," Franklin A. Gennin, county executive director of the Pearl River-Hancock County ASCS Office said.
This step is necessary to assure eligibility for program benefits and to protect 1983 crop acreage bases. Therefore, both program participants and non-participants must report crop acres, he said.
Acreage bases for participating crops will not be reduced in 1983, according to Gennin. "This means that the 1983 acreage base for program crops will equal the 1982 crop acreage base except for rotation farms."
The 1983 acreage base for crops with zero planted acres reported will equal the 1982 crop acreage base except for rotation farms.
Gennin said the crop acreage base on rotation farms will be protected in accordance with established rotation patterns in corresponding years.
To protect their 1983 crop acreage bases, it is important for farmers who are not participating in the 1982 acreage reduction programs to report their acreages," the ASCS official said.
Pearl River and Hancock County farmers have until July 15 to report grain sorghum and peanuts.
For more details on 1983 crop acreage bases and crop reporting contact the local ASCS office at 108 West Cumberland Street, Poplarville or call 796-4245.

Hancock tax collector outlines law changes effective July 1

Legislation enacted by the 1982 Legislative Session that will become effective July 1, 1982. Several significant changes are presented for the interest of the citizens of Hancock County.

House Bill 569:

1) The Privilege Tax on all automobiles regardless of weight will become $15 annually. There will be no annual reduction of the tax. Motorcycles will be taxed at $8 annually.

2) All trailers, including semi-trailers as well as boat trailers will pay a privilege tax of $10, plus ad valorem taxes.

3) Beginning Oct. 1, 1982, The State Tax Commission may issue regulations that will provide for periods of registration for less than one year. This will apply to new registrations only, and will be designed to eliminate the great number of registrations that occur in October and November. (October registrations now exceed an average month by approximately 600 percent.)

4) Application for a substitute license tag must be accompanied by a copy of a report made to the appropriate law enforcement officials relative to the loss or theft of the original license tag. The fee for substitute tag is increased to $10. Also, amateur radio operator's license tags are increased to $15 annually.

5) Antique automobiles must be currently registered to qualify for an antique license tag. The fee is increased to $25.

6) If a vehicle is not operated upon the highways of this state from the time of the last license expiration date to the date of application for a license tag, the privilege tax will be prorated from the first day of the month in which application is made to the expiration date established by the previous tag or decal. A penalty will be calculated from the original due date of the license tag. An affidavit must also be submitted attesting to the fact that the vehicle was not operated during the period.

7) Penalties will be assessed at the rate of five percent for the first 15 days of delinquency plus five percent for each additional 30 day period of delinquency, or part thereof. The maximum penalty is 25 percent.

The tax is due upon each vehicle the day of purchase or acquisition; however, penalties will not be assessed if application is made and the tax paid within seven working days immediately following the date of acquisition. This penalty also applies to ad valorem tax due.

8) When any person, other than a dealer or agent, shall sell, assign or transfer a motor vehicle to another person, the new owner must register the vehicle with his local county tax collector and pay the annual privilege tax due. However, upon presentation of the current tag receipt and license tag, credit will be allowed for the remaining portion of the taxes previously paid.

9) The registration year will begin on the first day of the month following the month in which the vehicle was purchased.

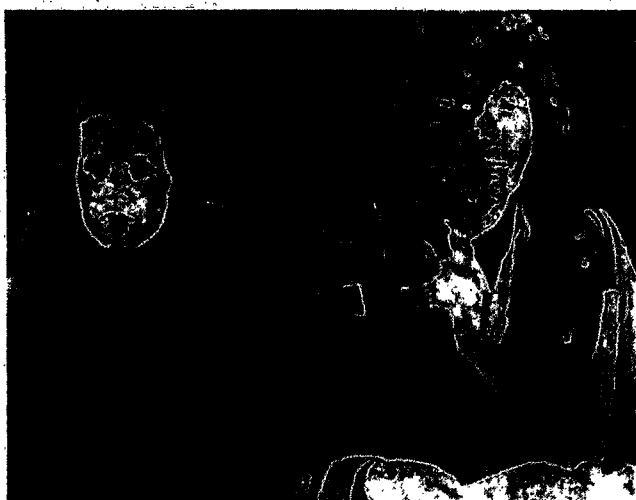

Currently, the registration year begins the first day of the month of registration.

House Bill 824: Requires mobile homes which are to be classified as real property to have both the wheels and axles removed and be anchored and blocked in accordance with rules and procedure promulgated by the Insurance Commissioner.

It also requires the assessor to issue a certificate certifying that the mobile home has been classified as real property. The assessor must have the certificate recorded in the county where the property is located. A $12.00 fee is charged.

As in the past, the mobile home owner must own the land on which the mobile home is located before it can be classified as real property. The purpose of the legislation is to permit FHA, FNMA, etc. financing on newly acquired mobile homes. The effective date is July 1, 1982.

House Bill 1189: Amends the homestead exemption law to allow homestead exemption where a business is located in the home but limited to one-half of the assessed value, not to exceed $2,500. The same rule applies to a business in home as to an apartment in home.

—Officers To Be Elected—

Nuptial Mass unites LaFontaine, Knight

Annunciation Catholic Church in Kiln was the setting for the May 15 ceremony uniting Lois Ray Knight of Picayune and Ronald Edward LaFontaine of Bay St. Louis.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ray Knight of Picayune. The groom's parents are Mrs. Iona LaFontaine of Lakeshore and the late Lawrence LaFontaine.

Rev. Austin Walsh celebrated a 2 p.m. Nuptial Mass. The church was decorated with standing baskets of white gladioli, carnations, daisy pom-poms, baby's breath and greenery. Musical selections were provided by Tom Satterlee of Diamondhead.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white sheerganza over bridal taffeta, fashioned with fitted bodice enhanced with schiffli lace medallions and seed pearls. The full, sheer high sleeves ended in tapered cuffs closed with tiny schiffli lace covered buttons. Her gored skirt was edged in schiffli lace, and extended to a chapel length train. A lace and pearl embellished caplet held her fingertip veil of illusion, which was trimmed in schiffli lace.

She carried a cascade of white, silk roses, fresh stephanotis and baby's breath interspersed with pearls and satin pigot ribbon.

Lealie Kelly of Metairie, La., cousin of the bride, was maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Linda Knight and Faye Knight of Picayune, sisters-in-law of the bride; and Brenda Carver of Lakeshore, sister of the groom.

The attendants were attired in identically designed formal gowns in rainbow colors of blue, green, peach and orchid chiffon print over crepe. Satin ribbon sashes encircled the waistlines.

They wore picture hats of matching crepe with a floral tulle accented with satin ribbon tied in a bow at the back, and carried single stemmed creamy white roses, with bell flowers and satin ribbon streamers to complement the colors of their gowns.

Miss Melissa Knight of Picayune, niece of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a dress of pale yellow organza over crepe fashioned with pin-tucked bodice edged in tiny lace with a satin sash. Her headpiece of daisies was interspersed with baby's breath.

Matthew Knight of

Picayune, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Jimmy LaFontaine of Waveland served his brother as best man.

Groomsmen were Dody Knight and Johnnie Knight of Picayune, brothers of the bride; and Michael LaFontaine, brother of the groom.

Ushers were Bill Kelly of Metairie, La. and Ronnie Penton of Lakeshore.

The mother of the bride chose for the occasion a formal gown of pink chiffon over crepe, fashioned with empire bodice and matching chiffon long sleeved jacket.

The groom's mother was attired in a blue floral print gown featuring scoop neckline and long full sleeves. Both mothers wore white rose corsages.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Hwy. 603 in Kiln.

The bride's table held a four tiered wedding cake decorated with roses and daisies, flanked by candle arrangements of daisy pom-poms, carnations, baby's breath and greenery. Similar arrangements decorated the food and punch tables.

On return from a wedding trip to the Grand Canyon in Arizona, the couple will reside in Lakeshore.

Bay writer's anecdote makes Reader's Digest

Paul L. Vegas of 812 N. Beach Boulevard is the recipient of a $300 check from Reader's Digest for an anecdote submitted to the magazine's department, "All In A Day's Work." The contribution appears in the June issue.

"One of the directors at the NASA Test Facility in Bay St. Louis, Miss., was known for his inflexible edicts, which he invariably sent in writing, and for which he insisted on a signed receipt declaring that the orders were received and understood. One day we were rerouting an underground pipe through his office and had to use a jackhammer to break through the concrete floor. I was standing in the hall to get away from the noise and dust when a couple of the director's assistants came by.

There's nothing in the world wrong with the traditional old-fashioned potato salad that grandma and her grandma before her used to make by the gallons in the 'good ole summertime' for picnics, covered-dish suppers, backyard barbecues and what have you.

But it's fun, too, to stray from well-worn paths of cooking and serving. I, for instance, am very partial to potato salad made in the French countryside fashion, splashed with white wine and oil and vinegar and accented with green onions and parsley and seasonings, and served at room temperature instead of the traditional potato salad, made with homemade mayonnaise and celery and onion and boiled eggs, served cold from the refrigerator.

I also like potato salad at times served hot, with bacon and onion accents. And a friend of mine always adds bits of chopped apple to her potato salad, and still another friend insists upon slivers of ham or salami in her potato salad. That's what makes the gastronomic world go 'round!

So, here's

POTATO SALAD FRANCAISE
2 lbs. small, new red potatoes
½ cup finely chopped green onions
1 minced clove of garlic
4 Tbsp. finely chopped fresh parsley
1 Tbsp. fresh tarragon (or ½ Tbsp. dried tarragon)
¼ cup dry white wine
3 Tbsp. corn or other oil
Dash of pepper, salt, cayenne
Splash (about a teaspoon) vinegar, preferably red wine vinegar

Bring the potatoes, unpeeled, to a boil and cook until tender, about 15 minutes or so. Remove from fire, drain. As soon as you can comfortably handle them, peel and cut into thin slices, and put them in a bowl.

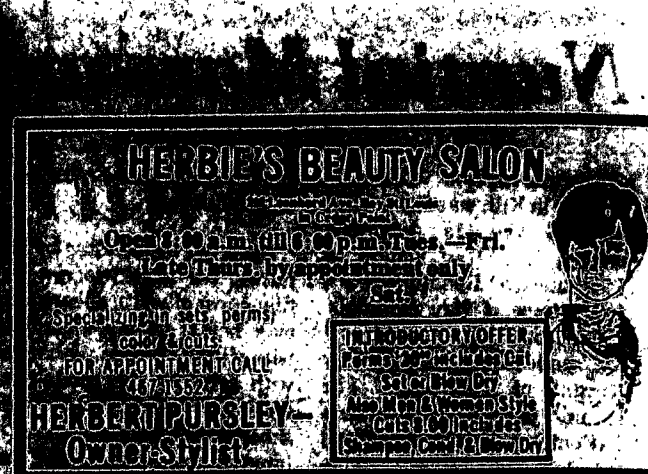

Add the other ingredients, and toss well together. Garnish with lettuce and sprigs of parsley. (Servings, 6 to 8). When I am making this for my own use, not for guests, I leave the peels on the potatoes, for as well as for the fact that I like them. Sometimes I add bits of the carrot, sometimes I add a thin slice of onion, sometimes I add a bit of celery, and sometimes I add a bit of apple. (Copyright, 1962, Katharine D.M. Caire)

ETV Brief

MONTEVERDI OPERA
"Great Performances" will present three musical works by 17th century composer Claudio Monteverdi at 8 p.m. on consecutive Mondays, beginning June 7, on the Mississippi ETV Network. Jean-Pierre Ponnelle made the films of the three performances for the Zurich Opera. The three operas are "Orpheus," "The Return of Ulysses" and "The Coronation of Poppea."

Composed in 1609, "Orpheus" was Monteverdi's first opera and is the earliest opera still being performed today. "The Return of Ulysses" was written in 1641 and reveals a transition from Renaissance to the Baroque styles in Monteverdi's music in the 32 years since he had composed "Orpheus."

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." —John 10:10

By Shawn Murphy

MINISTER, BAY ST. LOUIS CHURCH OF CHRIST

The marital covenant is a blessed relationship in the sight of God, perhaps because He realized that it would be the key to a strong family, church, community and, indeed, society as a whole. And because of this mammoth influence we are morally obligated to make our marriages all that they can and should be.

One way that we can do this is to familiarize ourselves with the greatest barriers to abundant marital living. One of the most deadly causes of broken marriages is emotional immaturity.

Robert Kelley wrote an article entitled "The Difference Between Immature Love and Mature Love" in his work, Courtship, Marriage and the Family.

In the following list from that article, which most characterizes your relationship with your spouse?

IMMATURE LOVE

1. Love is born at first sight and will conquer all.
2. Love demands exclusive attention and devotion, and is jealous of outsiders.
3. Love is characterized by expectation and direct need gratification.
4. Love is built upon physical attraction and sexual gratification. Sex often dominates the relationship.
5. Love is static and egocentric. Change is sought in the partner in order to satisfy one's own needs and desires.

6. Love is romanticized. The couple do not face reality or are frightened by it.

7. Love is irresponsible and fails to consider the future consequences of today's action.

MATURE LOVE

1. Love is a developing relationship and deepens with realistically shared experiences.
2. Love is built upon self-acceptance and is shared unselfishly with others.
3. Love seeks to aid and strengthen the loved one without striving for recompense.
4. Love includes sexual satisfaction, but not to the exclusion of sharing in other areas of life.

5. Love is growing and developing reality. Love expands to include the growth and creativity of the loved one.

6. Love enhances reality and makes the partners more complete and adequate persons.

7. Love is responsible and gladly accepts the consequences of mutual involvement.

As a minister, I am deeply concerned about family life. And so I am happy to share with you an opportunity to enrich your marriage.

The Brecheen - Faulkner "Marriage Enrichment Film Series" was born out of the conviction that marital renewal is the best cure for the divorce epidemic.

Whether you're honeymooning or celebrating a 50th anniversary, the principles revealed can't fail to help you build a stronger marriage.

The films are totally Bible-centered and ecumenical in outlook and free to the entire community. The first film will run Sunday night, June 13 at 6 p.m.

They will be shown eight consecutive Sunday nights through August 1 at the Church of Christ in Bay St. Louis.

This may be the best thing you'll ever do for your marriage.

Always waiting

SON DESERVES LOVE

Q. Our 15-year-old son lives in California and is a homosexual. This has caused my husband, children and me much sorrow. Our son has a good job, attained a master's degree on his own, and is well liked.

But there is a distance between us because of his homosexuality. Is this a biological factor of something he has taken up himself? It grieves me to exclude him from some of our generous gifts, as at Christmas.

A. I am not a doctor of medicine and therefore cannot discuss homosexuality from that standpoint. But this young man is your son and as difficult as the problem may be to you, he is entitled to be included and treated as a son with love and understanding.

If there is something you would like to ask Dr. and Mrs. Peale, write to them at Box 500, Pawling, N.Y. 12564.

Q. I have never sought outside help, but I have decided it was time I did. I am 17 and I have a one-month old baby. The father of my child is 18, but is away in prison.

Ever since we met two years ago he has constantly been into trouble. He was sent to a correctional school for boys, but he was out eight months later and got into trouble again. The last straw was when he was sentenced to five years in prison.

My relationship with him is a series of waiting for him to be released. Every time he promises not to get into any more trouble. I do love him, but I'm afraid I'll marry him I'll wait half of my life to be with him. Do you have any advice?

A. I believe you would be well advised to break off the relationship.

You have had nothing but trouble and unhappiness thus far which seems to indicate you can only expect more of the same in the future.

We are sending you our booklet Try Prayer Power which we hope you will read and practice, for it can help you. Any reader wishing a free copy may write to us at Box 500, Pawling, N.Y. 12564.

No One Cares

Q. I'm 18-years-old and just graduated from high school. Sometimes I don't feel like a whole person. There's so much pressure in life, and I take things so seriously and put myself in a bad mood. Then I get depressed and hate myself and I feel guilty. My friends sometimes call and tell me their problems, and I listen. But they don't always listen to me when I have a problem, and my mother doesn't usually seem to care either. I've thought about suicide many times. Why don't people care about me? Please help me. Sometimes I just don't think I can cope anymore.

A. You can't be best with emotional trouble at the bottom of which is a lack of thought control. You can develop positive thinking by being in your self and being outgoing toward others. This in time will correct your super sensitivity. It does help to talk to someone when you feel you are a victim of pressure and unable to cope. Therefore we recommend that you find a good counselor who will not only listen to you but can help you gain control of your life.

Please read our booklet, Twelve Steps to a Happy and Successful Life, which we are sending you. Any reader wishing a free copy may write to us at Box 500, Pawling, N.Y. 12564.

HBO During June
Generally I spend most of the space in this column reviewing or analyzing a particular movie or event. This week I'm going to flip through the HBO guide for June and give some brief thumbnail sketches of the movies and specials contained therein. Shall we begin?

1. 'Stripes' is a Sad Sack comedy come to life. A masculine Private Benjamin that isn't half as funny. Bill Murray gives an effective, humorous performance as the unlikely leader of a platoon of raw, and I mean raw, recruits. An okay film that you should catch if you have time, but don't break your neck looking for it.

2. 'Blow Out' is a Brian

DePalma film starring John Travolta and Nancy Allen. 'Blow Out' is a fine exercise in terror with John Lithgow providing the Liddy-like mentality required to make it work. DePalma's black humor pays off with a one joke ending that may depress, may delight, but won't disappoint.

3. 'Dog Day Afternoon' is an Al Pacino showcase. If it hadn't been for Jack Nicholson's outrageous performance in 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest,' Pacino would have won an Oscar for his performance as a befuddled bank robber.

Aiding Pacino in this caper fiasco is the late John Cazale. When Sonny (Pacino) asks Sal (Cazale) what country he wants to go to when they get out of the bank, Sal looks at Sonny and says, "Wyoming."

4. 'Atlantic City' was my pick for the best picture of 1981. It is a pleasure to watch an old pro like Burt Lancaster glide through this intelligent drama. Susan Sarandon gives excellent support as a waitress who wants to be a blackjack dealer. This movie is a joy to behold, from its imagery, to its acting, to its optimistic ending. 'Atlantic City' will grip you throughout.

5. 'Continental Divide' was one of John Belushi's last films, and one of his best. In this movie, Belushi played totally out of character and proved that he could act. Blair Brown, who was very good in 'Altered States,' plays very well off of Belushi. A very good small film.

6. 'Private Benjamin' gives us the original Laugh-In blonde, Goldie Hawn, in her best comedic performance. Nominated for an Oscar, Hawn plays a recruit who's not really ready for the U.S. Army. But movie audiences were definitely ready for this picture as they flocked to it in droves. Another good film.

7. 'Chu Chu and the Philly Flash' is supposed to be one of the worst films ever made. It's really hard to figure out why because the movie stars two heavyweight comedy actors, Alan Arkin and Carol Burnett. Still, you take your chances with this one.

8. 'Brubaker' gives us Robert Redford in a fact-based story about a Southern prison farm. Co-starring Jane Alexander, 'Brubaker' is a tough, hard-hitting drama that contains graphic violence but it is not to be missed.

9. 'Starting Over' is a movie about divorce. Burt Reynolds gives his best performance since 'Deliverance' as a writer searching for love. Candice Bergen plays his ex while Jill Clayburgh plays the new lady in his life. This movie is sort of like reversal on the 'Unmarried Woman' theme.

10. 'The Great Muppet Caper' is fun for the whole family. A romp through London with the crazy animals that have become a part of America's rich animation fabric. The movie literally sparkles with bad jokes, elaborate dance numbers and great special effects.

11. 'High Risk' is supposed to be one of the most overlooked movies of 1981. It stars James Brolin in a yarn about ripping off a wealthy drug dealer. Lindsay Wagner, James Coburn and Anthony Quinn co-star.

Other picks include: 'Far from the Madding Crowd,' 'The Last Metro,' and 'Silver Streak.'

June is a very good month on HBO indeed. Enjoy.

If you want to go out to the movies, good bets at the Choctaw Cinema IV are 'Chariots of Fire' and Steven Spielberg's production of 'Poltergeist.'
